

Alfonso Henrique Drives the Moors from Lisbon
The national independence of Portugal is secured
When Alfonso Henrique became Count of Portugal in 1128 his domain, his domain was only as far so. as Coimbra.
Most of Portugal had been in Muslim control since 8th Cen. In 1139 he began to call himself king and in 1143 his cousin, Alfonso VII of Castile recognizes his autonomy.
A body of English Crusaders was passing in service on its way to the Holy Land, and with their assistance Alfonso captured the great town of Lisbon from the Moors in 1147. As money was not used as a cultural and the money always became a royal possession.

The Kingdom of Portugal was this kind of thing in 1147 + 605, although Lisbon did not become the capital until 1256 and Algarve was not finally recovered from the Moors until 1270.
